INTRODUCTION

Quranic education encompasses more than mere study of the sacred text; it involves a comprehensive process of shaping one's identity, values, and behaviour in alignment with the teachings of the Islamic faith. At Amaliah High School, Quranic education is not merely a part of the curriculum, but rather a fully integrated aspect that aims to develop students' character and morality comprehensively. Amaliah High School's Quranic education program is designed to cultivate a holistic personality within the Islamic education framework. The program not only imparts a deep understanding of the sacred text, but also motivates students to apply its teachings in their everyday lives. At Amaliah High School, the Quranic education encompasses more than just studying the text and its interpretation. It also incorporates practical elements such as cultivating noble morals, developing social skills, and fostering moral awareness.

Nevertheless, in the context of the contemporary world and its rapidly evolving challenges, it is imperative to ascertain the true impact of Quranic education at Amaliah High School on the comprehensive growth of students. The essential enquiries regarding the integration of Quranic learning into learners' daily lives, its impact on their cognition, behaviour, and emotions, and the extent to which it contributes to their personal growth, remain significant topics of debate and research. Hence, this study seeks to address these enquiries through a thorough examination of the impact of Quranic education on the growth and progress of students at Amaliah High School. This research will utilise a thorough qualitative approach to investigate different dimensions and aspects of the Quranic educational experience. The objective is to gain a more comprehensive understanding of how Quranic education contributes to the development of students' character, morality, and academic progress at Amaliah High School.

METHODS

Academic pursuit of this study builds upon previous research by employing the method of observation.

1. Observation Planning: The initial stage of the observation method involves meticulous planning. The researcher will determine the objective of the observation, the variables under scrutiny, and the duration of the observation. The study will primarily examine the Quranic education process at Amaliah High School, specifically focussing on the dynamics between teachers and students, the instructional techniques employed, and the students' reactions to the curriculum.
2. Observation Context Selection: The observations will take place in different contexts within Amaliah High School, such as Quran classes, extracurricular activities focused on religious education, and religious events held at the school. This will enable researchers to obtain a more comprehensive understanding of the implementation of Quranic education in the school.
3. Observation Techniques: Researchers or a proficient observation team will directly conduct the observations. The researcher employs participant observation, actively engaging in Quranic educational activities, and non-participant observation, passively observing without interference.
4. Observation Instrument: Researchers will utilise pre-prepared checklists or observation sheets to systematically document different facets of the Quranic education process. This will encompass the examination of teacher-student interactions, employed teaching strategies, and the extent of student engagement.
5. Data Analysis: The data obtained from observations will be analysed methodically to identify emerging patterns and themes. The analysis will encompass an evaluation of the efficacy of instructional techniques, the degree of student engagement, and other variables that impact the Quranic education process at Amaliah High School.

Through the utilisation of this observational approach, it is anticipated that this study will offer a more profound comprehension of the execution of Quranic education at Amaliah High School and its impact on the development of students.

RESULTS & DISCUSSION

Result

The Quranic education is an instructional procedure that seeks to acquaint individuals with, comprehend, and internalise the Islamic doctrines encompassed within the Quran. In addition to studying sacred texts, Quranic education encompasses the instruction of moral values, ethics, and conduct that align with Islamic teachings. Quranic education is commonly incorporated into the curriculum of formal education, including Islamic schools and other educational institutions.

The Quran education at Amaliah High School encompasses two primary components: tahfidz, which involves memorising the Quran, and the cultivation of virtuous behaviour in accordance with the teachings of the Quran and Hadith. Tahfidz, the practice of committing to memory and comprehending the sacred text of the Quran, serves as the primary foundation for studying the Quran. The process of tahfidz not only enhances students' cognitive abilities in comprehending and memorising sacred texts, but also bolsters their resilience in confronting academic and everyday obstacles.

In addition to tahfidz, the Quranic education program at Amaliah High School also prioritises the cultivation of virtuous behaviour in accordance with the teachings of the Quran and Hadith. Through this process of habituation, students are instructed to internalise and implement the moral principles outlined in the Quran in all aspects of their lives. This process establishes a strong ethical basis for students, equipping them to confront diverse situations and challenges in social existence.

The Quranic education at Amaliah High School encompasses a comprehensive approach that integrates the study of the holy text, the cultivation of character, and the fostering of virtuous behaviour. Schools foster the comprehensive growth of students in line with Islamic principles by integrating tahfidz (Quran memorisation) and promoting good ethics. This aligns with the vision and mission of SMA Amaliah, which aims to cultivate a generation that possesses not only intellectual intelligence, but also upholds strong moral values and noble character.

Discussion

The primary objective of Quranic education is to acquaint students with the Islamic teachings found in the Quran. This encompasses comprehending sacred scriptures, ethical principles, and moral values that form the foundation of Islamic teachings.
